

GUEST SAFETY BRIEFING.....

You will be spending a week or longer in Alaska with Soaring Eagle Fishing and Adventures. Much of what you will be doing during the week features exposure to a level of outdoor activity most people are not accustomed to in their daily lives.

Whether the activity is a saltwater fishing trip, kayaking, flight-seeing, remote fly out fishing or even a car trip into town you will probably encounter conditions requiring a little forewarning and a little thought in the process.

We will be reviewing the following list of things to be mindful of during your welcoming briefing. We will leave a copy with you and keep a copy in your guest file indicating that we have had a chance to explain some of the do's and don'ts while you enjoy your visit in Alaska.

- Traffic rules are much the same as at your home but when in doubt ask and be careful. This includes conduct with school buses, turns on red, posted speed limits.
- Emergencies should be reported by dialing 911 – same as most other places. The local area is serviced by a volunteer fire department, which has an EMS capability.
- The non-city areas of Alaska are patrolled by the Alaska State Troopers a very well staffed, trained and helpful organization should you encounter them during your visit. You may encounter State Park Rangers and Fish&Wildlife Enforcement Officers who are also State Troopers. All of these individuals and organizations are charged with local area law enforcement and fish and game rule enforcement. We will explain fishing regulations to you at your welcome orientation in that they change during the course of the summer and from river to river etc..
